WASHINGTON, Jan. 6 (WP).-Most of the nation's largest corporations appear to be dominated or controlled by eight institutions, including six banks.

This is a major finding of a new Senate study of the 30 principal bolders of voting stock in corporations. In addition to the banks, the main stockholders include an agency of the New York Stock Exchange and the country's biggest

The 419-page report contains many previously inaccessible or obscure facts, but it acknowledges that a large data gap remains—on the concentration of stockholdings in bank trust departments and among other institutional investors.

The study, "Disclosure of Corporate Ownership," was published by two Senate Government Operations subcommittees. One is headed by Sen. Lee Metcalf. D. Mont., the sponsor of a bill to require public disclosure of the true owners of large companies, and the other by Sen, Edmund S. Muskie,

In May, 1972, Sen. Metcalf sent a letter of inquiry on stockholdings to the 100 industrial corporations having the largest sales volumes, to the 50 leading firms in each of four categories—transportation, public utilities (including com-munications), retailing and banking—and to the 24 major life insurance companies that are not mutuals (mutually owned insurers have no stockholders).
Of these 324 corporations, 89 responded fully. A large proportion consisted of airlines, railroads and communications companies, which are required to file information with federal regulatory agencies.

Fitty-eight firms did not reply to Sen. Metcalf's letter. Among them were 15 industrial corporations, including General Foods, Aluminum Co. of America and Georgia Pacific Corp. Retailing firms made up the business group showing the greatest lack of response.

There were 177 corporations that supplied partial or irrelevant data. The commonest justification given was a professed need for confidentiality.

This justification was called into question in the Senate. report, which noted that while some firms compiled fully with Sen. Metcalf's request, others in their categories did not. For

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6 (WP).— Vice-President Ford suggested today that a compromise could be struck between President Nixon and the Senate Watergate committee chairman, Sen, Sam J. Ervin jr., D., N.C., in Sen, Ervin'e sweeping request for nearly 500 Watergate-related documents and

Mr. Ford, interviewed on an NBC News television program, "Meet the Press," called Sen. Ervin's bid a "scattergun approach" and a "fishing expedition" and said be agreed with the President's decision to reject it.

But the Vice-President said he thought that if the committee was "willing to make some refinements in the demands, cutting it down to things that are more relevant to the committee's responsibilities, then I think there may be—and I underline may be —some area of compromise."

Mr. Ford said he had not dis-cussed the issue of disclosure of Watergate information with Mr. Nixon in any depth in recent weeks. But, he said, "I hope and trust as we go down the road perhaps there can be some com-

The Vice-President also said that he has urged the continua-tion and expansion of Operation Candor—the release of information on Watergate-related matters designed to repair the President's credibility with the public.

He strongly favored the release of information on Mr. Nixon's income tax and financial situations, he said, "and I hope and trust, despite what I understand is some reluctance at the present time, that the President continues with Operation Candor with a full disclosure or white paper involve ing the ITI matter and the so-called milk fund contributions."

The Vice-President said, however, that the President, by concentrating on the energy crisis. the Middle East problem and other matters, will increase his ican people even more quickly and more importantly than through Operation Candor.

Asked about a recent poil by the Roper Organization that in-dicated 79 percent of individuals surveyed believed one or more of the serious charges made against Mr. Nixon, Mr. Ford sidestepped the question and noted that 45 percent in the same poll were against impeachment of the President (to 44 percent for it). "Somewhere in between it seems to me," he said, "the American people may have some lack of full faith in every action by the President, but, on the other hand, the majority are not in favor of impeachment action that is contemplated by some in the House of Representatives."

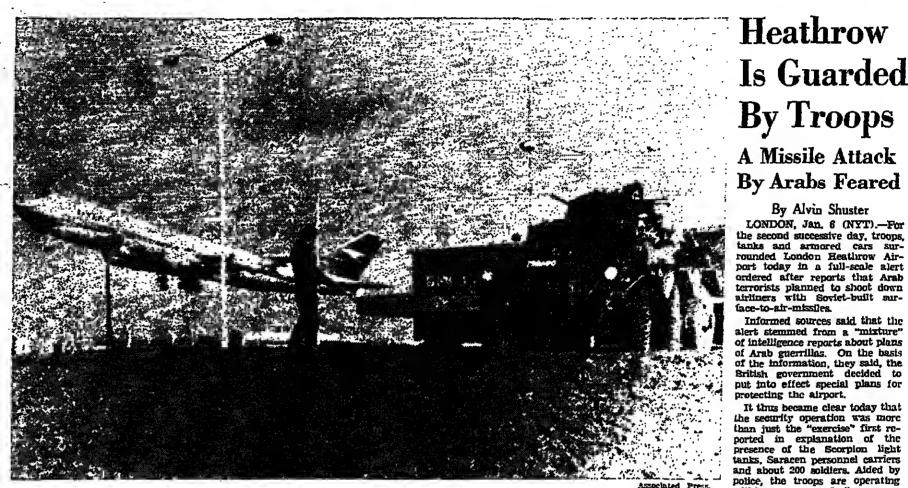

Mr. Ford said he did not believe there are the necessary votes either in the House Judiciary Committee or the full House for impeachment, and he reiterated his personal belief thet the President is innocent of any impeachable conduct.

Implicit in Mr. Kissinger's remarks yesterday, which appeared to be intended to exhibit common understanding between Israel and the United States, was the sug-gestion that the two countries were not fully in accord on every position Israel would take in the opening of the Geneva bargaining.

New Generation of Britons Now on the Dole

By Richard Eder LONDON, Jan. 6 (NYT) .-Sometimes alone, but usually in twos or threes, for moral support, the applicants made their way along the asphalt path behind the Catford Labor Exchange and through a door marked "Unemployment Benefits"

They were dressed well, if inexpensively. Their hesitations and their unfamiliarity with the procedures made it plain that today's generation of London's machinists, typists, printers and dress-cutters has come a long way from the world of their fathers for whom, in the 1930s, the dole was an everyday affair.

Last week, as the British government's answer to the energy crisis and the coalminers' slowdown, most British workers were put on a three-day week. Since Monday, about 750,000 have registered for unemployment payments to make up for part of their pay loss, and in the next week or two the total is likely to be several

Behind the Catford Labor Exchange, flanked on one side by the old Baptist church and on the other by a raw-concrete parking garage, the debate was carried on more quietly, with puzzlement some confusion and a general tendency to believe that what is happening is an outrage although probably not a catastrophe.

Growing Vegetables

'I think I'll spend my two days off putting vegetables in my garden," sald Zita Pryor, a lively, slender young woman who works as a machinist in a dress-making factory. She earns $60 a week. This will now be cut to about $36.

Unemployment benefits in the case of those who have been reduced to a three-day work week consist of a weekly payment of about $4.30 supplemented by additional payments for each de-

"It's diabolical," said Joseph Lyons, a tall, white-haired press operator. "Mr. Heath has loaded inflation onto the shoulders of the working man with this three-day week. We all know there was enough coal to last the winter.

cut down on food and so on, but what about the hire-purchase payments?" he wondered. . Nobody feared great personal hardship over the next few weeks, and almost all believed that some settlement would be found. But it was common to find a feeling of depressed con-fusion, a belief that the troubles were unnecessary, yet would never really be resolved. Well be tight if this is only for a while. If it takes longer it will hurt," said Felix Rankin, a middle-aged precision grinder. Mr. Rankin is a bachelor and plans to spend his idle days at the library.

'Job to Govern' "I am pessimistic," he eaid. "It's the government's job to govern, isn't it? To sort things out, isn't it? They say the unions' demands would raise the cost of living. But it's going up anyway, isn't it?" He buttoned his overcoat up to his throat and prepared to set off for home. "Only a good government could straighten all this out," he said. as long as I can remember."

President Denies Cox Firing Tied to Fears of Jury Action

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif., Jan. 6 (AP).—The White House denied last night a published report that a reason for the firing of Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor was a fear that President Nixon would be named by a grand jury as an unindicted coconspirator in the Watergate

The New York Times carried the report in today's editions. White House Deputy Press Sec-retary Gerald L. Warren said: Any story that Mr. Cox was dismissed for such a reason is totally false, Mr. Cox was disabide by a presidential instruc-

The Times also quoted well informed sources as saying that Mr. Cox and his staff had discussed the possibility of naming Mr. Nixon as an unindicted coconspirator as a solution to the constitutional restraint against indicting an incumbent President. The sources said that no serious consideration was given then to the concept.

Interviewed in Tucson, last night, Mr. Cox said that he had never considered such action.

"There is no basis whatsoever for any supposition that I ever considered naming the President as an unindicted co-conspirator in an indictment," he said.

Mr. Cox, who spoke in Tucson at a $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner for Rep. Morris K. Udall, D., Ariz., said: "No member of my staff ever made such a recommendation to me. To the best of my knowledge, no member of my staff ever entertained such

Question by Richardson

The Times story, by Seymour M. Hersh, quoted Mr. Cox in a telephone interview as saying: "Elliot called me up and asked if it was a fact that I was about to come out with such an indictment," the naming of Mr. Nixon as an unindicted co-conspirator. Such a designation is usually re-served for those participants in a criminal activity who agree to aid the prosecution by testifying against others involved.

"I said, 'No,' it was not a fact, Mr. Cox continued, "and Elliot's response was, Good. I'll take this back and maybe it'll do some

"This does confirm that it was being bruited about in the White House," Mr. Cox added, "But I assure you there was no such thought in my mind. It was just a dream or a nightmare they [the White House] were having

In a subsequent telephone interview. The Times reported that Mr. Richardson said the matter "probably" had been raised with him by J. Fred Buzhardt, then a special counsel to Mr. Nixon,

"There was conjecture or rumor from some source," Mr. Richardson said, "and I brought it up in a low-key way with Archie."

Mr. Cox was dismissed on Oct. 20 by Solicitor General Robert H. Bork the acting attorney gen-eral, after Mr. Richardson and his deputy resigned rather than follow Mr Nixon's order to fire Mr. Cox. In a news conference six days after Mr Cox was dismissed. Mr. Nixon explained that the ouster occurred after the special prosecutor refused to accede to a "compromise' over the White House tapes. Mr. Cox who was promised an independent hand by Mr. Richardson when he took the poet, had no part in working out the so-called compromise.

The Times reported that sources close to the Watergate investigation headed by Mr. Cox's successor as special prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, Indicated that there were no plans to name Mr. Nixon as a co-conspirator in a group of cover-up indictments expected within six weeks.

A White House source defended the fears of last fall over the possible naming of Mr. Nixon as a co-conspirator, saying: "Rightly or wrongly, we thought that was always a possibility. This kind of thing was inherent in the situation from the outset." Another source with close White House connections explained that officials there had received "certain intelligence" indicating that the special prosecutor's office was seriously planning to name Mr. Nixon as an unindicted co-conspirator. "We had low-level intelligence from people on Cox's staff," the source said. "That was more than enough to raise ques-

After the Aspin protest Friday the Air Force reconsidered and decided it was not necessary for Brig. Gen. William R. Yost, the chief of staff of the Air Force Communications Service, to take his own plane on a two-week inspection trip of communications facilities in Europe.

The Air Force has ordered that Gen. Yost take one of the regular flights of the Military Airlift Command for the trip. The order was issued several hours after Rep. WASHINGTON, Jan. 6 (AP).-The Senate Internal Security Submmittee estimates that the makings for more than 5 billion marijuana and hashish elgarettes entered the United States last

That was enough to provide nearly 20 "joints" for every man, woman and child in the country far exceeds any previous estl-mates," it said in a report made public yesterday.

The subcommittee's estimate was based on drug-enfercement administration figures on scizurcs of marijuana and hashish, both products of the cannobis plant, for the first nine months of 1973. Projecting those figures for the final three months of the year, the estimate assumes that roughly 10 times as much marijuana and hashish gets into the country as is seized by authoritles.

Sen. James O. Eastland, chairman of the subcommittee, cailed this a fairly conservative rule of thumb and said that it indicated total consumption of marijuana in 1973 was roughly 17 million pounds and, of hashish, obout 500.000 pounds,

The subcommittee began an investigation of the world drug situation and its impact on internal security in 1972. Pro-Marijuana Effort

Sen. Eastland said that "the pandemic use of marijuana and hashish has been brought about, in part, by a militant pro-marijuana propaganda campaign conducted by many new-left organizations and by the entire underground press... And it has been stimulated, perhaps in a major degree, by a number of highly publicized reports, some official some unofficial, which have taken a rather benign attitude toward marijuana.

He said that Dr. Olav J. Braenden, director of the UN Narcotics Laboratory in Geneva, told the subcommittee last year that, among other things, researchers have found that "cannabis occumulates in the brains and gonade in the manner of DDT: that it produces fetal deformities in nimals, lo addition to abortions and stillbirths, in a manner that resembles the damage done by thal'dom'de; that it results in breakage and serious damage to huoman chromosomes, and that it seriously reduces the body's ability to produce DNA, a critical component of all cells, including the reproductive cells."

Tapes and Impeachment

transfer of more than 500 presidential tapes and documents, the Senate Watergate committee made a tactical error. It revived the still unsettled question of presidential privilege in a form which gives Mr. Nixon and his lawyers the right to claim that that committee is on a fishing expeditionthat is, that it hopes to search at large through a variety of material, rather than examine pin-pointed evidence of specific materiality to its work

Whether this is within the committee's powers can, of course, be debated at length. Sen. Ervin denies that the President has any constitutional authority to withhold evidence remanded by an authorized committee. The President insists that he must determine what can be turned over to the committee. And the law of the matter remains in doubt.

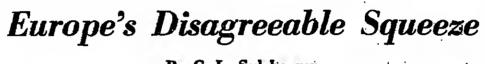

This repetition of an old confrontation could have been averted by an earlier agreement by the President, Congress and the courts on some method of screening presidential tapes and papers to preserve legitimate confidentiality while fulfilling the proper roles of congressional committees and the courts with respect to the investigation of criminal acts. It could also have been in part avoided had the committee confined its legal action to some particular evidence that would seem obviously necessary. But between President Nixon's original assertions of virtually unlimited executive privilege and the present sweeping claims of the committee, a new collision became inevitable.

This is unfortunate, because some grey areas between the separated powers under the Constitution allow a more practical form of government. It is also unfortunate

It is clear that hy asking for the mass issue before the nation: Shall Mr. Nixon be impeached? Because the vagueness of what, in constitutional word and spirit, constitutes an impeachable offense, this matter may well be decided, less upon specific acts and the President's responsibility for them, than upon far broader grounds of national (and political) interest.

> For example, the most powerful argument for impeachment at this moment does not rest on whether Mr. Nixon can be successfully convicted of specific wrongful assoclation with the illegal acts of some of his appointees, but whether the whole Watergate mess has so weakened the Nixon administration that the only answer is a new president. It might be pointed out that a recent Roper poll shows that 79 percent of those questioned believe that Mr. Nixon is connected directly with one or more serious offensesbut a slim majority is still opposed to impeachment. If, assuming that the House would bring impeachment proceedings, the Senate reacted in the way the public has done, Mr. Nixon would not be convicted. Would this, as advocates of impeachment contend, clear the air?

Presomably, evidence in the tapes and documents would do no more than confirm or refute some particulars of the public impression of Mr. Nixon's personal complicity in various aspects of Watergate. Neither would free him from responsibility, as head of the administration for the acts of his agents (which he has, in fact, assumed). Successful impeachment would depend to a very large degree, on quite different factors—to be precise, on votes in Congress. The quarrel over the tapes, which once loomed so large and which is still significant as a matter of precedent, has become, for because it may well be irrelevant to the main the major problem. a diversion.

The defense budget for fiscal year 1975, beginning July 1, was decided on last week amid typical confusion at the Nixon White House. It calls for spending at least $87 billion—far more than Nothing could more dismally underline the dangerous predicament of U.S. defense today. Thanks to the crushing burden of the all-volunteer armed services, military pay makes up an ever-larger percentage of the budget. Thus, the grim prospect: rising defense spending that fails to prevent dangerous Soviet superiority in wearons to other riority in wesponry in other fords, running as fast as possible but still not keeping np.

What further complicates this are vagaries of federal budgeting. While the anti-defense bloc in Congress boasts of a $2 billionplus cut in the Pentagon budget. that cut affects authorizations for future years only. In truth, tha $79 billion listed for defense in fiscal year 1974, ending June 30, actually climbed to $80 billion.

This confused none other than Roy Ash, President Nixon's imperious budget chief. Desperately trying to control ballooning epending Mr. Ash took $77 billion the $79-billion estimate for fiscal 1974 minus the $2-billion cut—as his starting defense figure, aiming to keep the fiscal 1975 projection around $80 billion.

Screams of outrage came from the Pentagon, sided no little by domestic counselor Melvin R. Laird. The former secretary of defense, leaving the Nixon ad-ministration for good Feb. I as a parting gesture convinced the budget-makers that $87 billion is really a bare-bones minimum.

The arithmetic is grim but simple. Taking the real fiscal 1974 spending figure $80 billion—as the starting point, more than $5 billion must be added for inflation and the inexprable salary de-mands of the all-volunteer army, plus $1.5 billion for the Yom Kippur war. The grand total af around $87 billion has now been accepted at the White House.

But that total, the Joint Chiefs of Staff believe, will not prevent the Soviet Union from overtaking the U.S. in conventional arms in the late 1970s. It would limit research and development spending to one-half the Kremlin's and would provide ship construction funds far less than Russia's. # Cooperation on Oil

Secretary of State Kissinger's warning that worldwide depression and economic suiclde lie ahead if the industrial nations persist in dealing separately and competitively with the energy crisis is blunt talk, but long

Mr. Kissinger proposes a high-level Energy Action Group of the United States. West Europe, Japan and Canada to lay down a vast program of collaborative action to overcome the medium and long-term energy shortage. The aim is to obtain assurance of required energy supplies at reasonable cost by encouraging consumers to conserve energy and to use existing supplies more rationally, by developing alternative energy sources and by providing producers an incentive to increase their supply. The personal effort President Nixon plans to initiate this week to persuade America's allies to join in this far-reaching project should help. elicit more favorable responses than have been forthcoming so far.

But what primarily concerns the Europeans and Japanese is the immediate energy shortage. Here, fear of further Arab retallation impedes a common front with the United States since West Europe and Japan are dependent on the Arabs for two-thirds or more of their oil, while American dependence is only about 10 percent, Without a generous United States offer to share more equitably the burdens of energy shortfalls, America's allies can hardly be expected to risk the joint approach to the oil producers that alone could discourage further economic warfare and monopolistic price

A joint approach could in fact alter the whole bargaining basis between the oil producing and consuming nations. The industrial countries obviously have need of Arab oil; but it is equally true that the Arab countries have need of the industrial nations' manufactured and agricultural goods, milltary equipment, shipping, financial markets and investment outlets. Moreover, a common front of the oil consumers, coupled with a restriction of nonessential uses and urgent development of other energy resources, would reduce demand for the oil that the Arabs must sell to survive.

Once the industrial countries pursue a united policy, their power to exert economic countermeasures will be immense, while the intolerable threat of economic disaster at the hands of the oil producers will correspondingly diminish. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The Elections in Israel

What is needed in Israel is less a change of partles in government than a change of generations. Such a change is, of course, inevitable in the long run, but it needs to come quickly if the chance of peace is not to be lost. The call for a new leadership after the October war came from inside the Labor party as well as outside and now that the election is over it is sure to be renewed. Mrs. Meir herself is said to be more than ever anxious for a well carned retirement. Her party has lost votes to doves as well as hawks. The case for a new leadership which can combine strength with flexibility is surely overwhelming.

Spain's Retreat From Europe

Madrid's new cabinet constitutes a shift to the right only in a limited sense. The previous government under Carrero Blanco was already so rightist that, aside from the ultra-Falangists, it would be hard to imagine anything further in that direction. But the old cabinet included some brilliant men, resolute intellectuals, some of whom had recognized that Spain can hardly have a future without moving closer to the rest of Europe. The new ministers, however, would regard that premise as an unproved theory.

The new cabinet unquestionably puts Europe in the background. Spain has again retreated behind the Pyrenees. Its fate is now being guided by men whose accustomed field of action is routine reception halls, secret passageways and the back stairs of the Spanish ministries.

According to the lawyers, who represent a little known Paris-based group for the defense of human rights, the Nobel laureate told them: "I'm going to have a trial. It's possible." But he reportedly added that he had had no direct word from Soviet authorities up to that time.

He was quoted as saying: "I've lived a lot. I was in prison. I will carry on."

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.-Clocks calm and "determined." almost were set one hour shead in mos of the United States today in a move to cut fuel consumption by using more daylight.

The Federal Energy Office expects a national saving of 100.000 to 150,000 barrels of oil a day during daylight-saving time, normally only in use during the summer months.

The assumption is that Americans use more light for their early evening activities than they do in the pre-dawn period. There may be some saving in fuel for heating, too, but experts appear to be less certain of that. The law providing for the experiment in year-round daylightsaying time will continue through April 1975. In the interval studies are to be done to determine whether or not the change does save energy. Some parts of the country are being exempted at tha start. Hawail Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and most of Indiana are

An announcement Friday from tha Uniform Time Office of the Department of Transportation said that Arizons also would receive an exemption through April, 1975, while the northeast corner of Oregon and most of Idaho, except for its northern panhandle, would receive temporary exemp-

Moscow Assails Schlesinger On Bid for Arms Budget Rise

By Hedrick Smith MOSCOW, Jan. 6 (NYT).—The Soviet press has attacked U. S. Defense Secretary James R. preparatory round of negotia-

Schlesinger's plans to seek an $85billion defense budget for 1975 with the criticism that it is an attempt "to turn back the process of detente." A lead editorial Friday in Izveotia, the government newspaper, charged "American hawks" fighting for acceleration of the arms race" and contended that this was "particularly unseemly" after Moscow had announced a formal reduction in its 1974 defense budget.

The Communist party's Central Committee in mid-December approved a Soviet defense budget of 17.6 billion rubles, or $23.5 billion, down from 17.9 billion rubles last year. But important items such as the Soviet nuclear-weapons program and key research development expenditures and are hidden in other budget items.

SALT ISSUE

The Izvestia commentary did not refer directly to the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks with Washington, but Moscow was indirectly criticizing Mr. Schlesinger's plans to build more flexibility into the American strategic missile force, an issue bearing directly on the arms talks. The arms negotiations are stalled over what some American officials reportedly regard as unfair Soviet demands that Moscow, affect, retain numerical advantages in missile launchers while having an opportunity to pull abreast of the United States sophisticated weapons tech-

For Mr. Siqueiros, last of the three great Mexican muralists, painting was inseparabe from politics. He was a veteran of two civil wars and was jailed several times for his Communist beliefs. The two other muralists were Jose Clemente Orozco, who died in 1949, and Diego Rivera, who died in 1957.

Mr. Siqueiros once abandoned painting for several years to organize leftist labor unions. Some of his most prolific periods as en artist came while he was jailed for political activities.

HOUSTON, Jan. 6 (UPI).-Scientists said yesterday that the Kohoutek comet, once billed as the astronomical wonder of the century, is going to be a "great disappointment" to gaze at, no more spectacular than the average star.

The Skylab-3 astronauts Lt. Col. Geraid P. Carr. Dr. Edward G. Gibson and Lt. Col. William R. Pogue, reported from their vantage point above earth's atmosphere that the comet was "fainter than faint" and growing increasingly dint as it moved away from the sun. Dr. Thornton Page, an astronomer with the Naval Research Lab of Washington, said that he and another NRL cometwatcher, Dr. Don Packer, had developed a theory to try to explain Kohoutek's drop in brightness. "It's going to be a great disappointment." Dr. Page said "I'm afraid it will be a rather faint object. My expectation is it will look like a rather norms; tar, not even a bright star. With the naked eye you might be able to see a little bit of the tail, but I'm afraid people will have to use bin-

In ceremonies in Peking, the two nations also agreed to allow 11 permanent newo correspondents from each side.

Progress was reported toward early conclusion of future accords on shipping and fisheries. However, there was no sign of an immediate breakthrough regarding a long-awaited aviation agreement, which is complicated by Japan's heavy airline traffic with Taiwan.

It is characteristic of their postwar relationship that a commercial agreement was the first to be concluded between them, and that the Japanese emissary traveled to Peking to sign the

New Issues to Test Appetite For Long-Term Dollar Debt

. By Carl Gewirtz ...

week's feature were being shown in CinemaScope, it surely would be entitled "The Dollar Rides Agent.

Leg teen in the previous epic s year ago, the dollar had been ostracised hemorrhaging profusely and left for dead.

The new script opens with a panoramic sweep of the wheat fields and soybean crops of the American heartland and a sudden close up of the dollar-succored and alive! Having lost some 40 percent of its former weight, the dollar has a new, lean look-rather gaunt — with only the alightest hint of a limp.

The niot thickens with the appearance of the Arab Legion coming and of the desert.

In a way that only Hollywood could, have contrived this new threat is turned to advantage and quick as a blink, the dollar has wiped out the gains made by the French franc. At almost five to the franc, the dollar is standing tailer than it was at the abortive peace pact of February 1973 and is almost back to its December 1971 size of 5.115. Meanwhile, the deutsche mark is organizing a retreat. Pre-sumably, both sides would be soment to see the dollar at 2.9. its February 1973 level. But outer perimeters of defense have estentializations been set up at the 28-mark to test the strength of the advance and, if not able to stop it, at least slow the arrival to the 2.9-mark.

The mark, besieged by the Arabs, is caught in a double bind. For as the dollar inches back to many's non-REC commodity imports - from oil to coffee - will cost more. These goods are bought for dollars and as it takes more marks to buy one dollar costs within Germany will go up as, inevitably, will prices. This, of course, is exacerbated by the skyrocketing dollar-price of oil and threatens to ruin German efforts to moderate tha politically volatile cost-of-living increases.

The same is true for all the other countries, whose currencles are rapidly retreating against the dollar as a bandwagon mentality sweeps the marketplace.

On the investment side, these dollar purchases split between looking for safe, high-income placements and those looking to maximize capital appreciation. The latter means a trip to New York, where stock prices are low and the outlook rosier than else

The former could come into the Eurobond market, but there is some question about timing Short-term rates for Eurodollar deposits are still higher than long-term rates—an abnormality stemming from the myriad un-certainties about the economic outlook and withering U.S. controls on capital outflowe that are tending to keep corporate treasurers looking for short-term finencing.

But this means that investors can get a better return on a three-month deposit than by buying bonds. The outlook, however, now that the traditionally heavy year-end corporate borrowing needs are over, is for the short-term rates to ease substantially-a move that has already

Although long-term rates are expected to stay relatively stable as the short-term rates tumble under them, there may be some attraction for investors to begin looking at bonds now, theory here is that with The an economic downturn looming

Prices of outstanding dollar Eurobonds were marked up last week and yields edged lower-a good omen for the re-opening of the new-issue market after its long hiatus. However, trading was very light and the signal could have been a false one of

The Re-Acclamation of U.S. Power

By John M. Lee

NEW YORK, Jan. 6 (NYT) .-One of the most striking aspects of the far-reaching energy crisis is the re-acclamation of the United States as the dominant world economic power. The reason is that the United States is far less dependent upon imported oil than any of its major trading partners (or rivals) except Can-

This country's 74 percent selfsufficiency (and Canada's 98 percent) compare with no better than 7 percent for West Germany and zero percent for Japan. This means that the United States is hurt less by a total embargo of Arab oil than countries that have Buffered only 25 percent cutbacks. Similarly, even though domestic oil prices here will be pulled up by the skyrocketing international prices, the burden of those higher prices falls far more heavily on Western Europe and Japan. The cost rises abroad combine with disruptions due to shortages to produce higher industrial costs and lower output, higher export prices and a potential loss of competitive position.

Amid the talk of resource shortages, it should be recalled that no country (except possibly the Soviet Union: is as well endowed with natural resources as the United States. Those America-the-Beautiful geography texts really mean something: the United States is the largest producer of corn. oil, coal, eoybeans, cop-per, natural gas, cotton, aluminum, oranges, magnesium and tomatoes.

Although the United States is increasingly dependent upon foreign suppliers, its big trade partners are even more dependent.

New York Stock Market

By Vartanig G. Vartan

NEW YORK, Jan. 6 (NYT).-Wall Street crammed come dazzling events into its four trading days last week.

The Dow-Jones industrials ended 1973 oo Monday with a fairly limp rally. But on Thursday, the second trading day of the new year, a huge recovery got under way and the Dow boomed by more

The index ended the week at 830.23, showing a not gain of Fucling the big Thursday rebound was the Federal Reserve Board's reduction in the required "margin," or cash payment, for buying or carrying stocks on credit to 50 percent from 65 percent. Late in the week, the market also benefited from improved hopes for a settlement of the Israeli-Arab conflict and from the reduction by several major banks in their prime lending rate to 9 3.4 percent from 10 percent:

It was a week when natural-resource stocks-notably the coppers. oils and uranium-rich issues-boomed while the old-line glamours

International Business Machines, the longtime favorite holding institutions; sold on Friday at its lowest price since 1971, falling 8 1/2 points to 230 3.4. The stock was affected adversely by request by the Telex Corporation that a Federal court hold IBM in

Weakness also was apparent in such former favorites as ARA Services, Ayon Products, Sony and Disney. The four leading gold issues on the New York Stock Exchange all traded at record prices during the week, reflecting higher prices in European bullion markets. New highs were set by Dome Mines, mpbell Red Lake Mines, Homestake Mining and ASA, Ltd. Dome soared 22 1/2 points in two days before its gains were clipped by Railroad stocks also turned in a brisk performance, buoyed by their oatural-resource holdings as well as by expectations for 1974

modity prices. The United States can improvement is that most pact of higher fuel costs, the has been a major beneficiary, orthodox of competitive weapons surplus in the American trade position is expected to grow.

A study by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Devel-opment shows that in the period 1960-71. American exports saw their share of the market shrink at a rate of 23 percent a year. This coincided with an 8.7 perceot annual increase for Japan. Last year, the situation reversed, Japan dropped i percent in market share while United States exports gained 2.5 percent.

It is loteresting to conjecture whether the export boom was reflecting the first dollar devaloation in December, 1971) or the second in February, 19731 or what some call the de facto third devaluation (the charp dollar depreciation in the floating-rate system from February to July!

Since it often takes 18 months more before an exchange-rate change turns the trade figures around, further benefits may be in store. However, it is apparent that an instaot and accelerated effect was felt when the eccond and third) devaluation priced American goods exceptionally low at a tune when the world economic boom had whipped de-mand to unprecedented levels.

On the financial side low American prices and deflated stock market values attracted a heavy inflow of long-term foreign capital and further bolstered the American position.

All these favorable developments are encapsulated in the strength of the dollar on foreign exchange markets. From a record depreciation of 21.5 percent against on jor currencies in July (measured against a 1970 benchmarks, the dollar has moved up rigorously to a depreciation of sbout 14 percent. The yen and European currencles have dropped

DENVER, Jan. 6 (NYT) .- For oil-shale development. Colorado 43 years, the United States has ranches, for example, have sold been sitting on the world's largest oilfield. True or false?

The answer is true. Sort of, until Tuesday. On that day in Denver, showly after 10 a.m. when the envelopes are opened, the federal government will lease to the highest bidder a 5,120-acre tract of land in northwestern Colorado that contains more of than is known to exist on the North Slope of Alaska.

And that tract is only a tiny chunk of about 16,500 square miles of Colorado. Utah and Wyoming under which lies from 600 billion to 3 trillion barrels of oll—enough to make Middle East oil reserves seem like a puddle and to make four-flushers out of Arab shelkhs.

As unlikely as it seems, in this relatively small sector of the West there is two or three times more oil than is known to exist in the entire rest of the world. But there are several catches.

The first is that it is not really oil at all. It is called oil shale, but even that is wrong. The rock in which it is located is not shale, and "it" is not oil

Called Maristones The rocks are called markstones and what is in them is called kerogen. By heating up the maristones to about 900 degrees, the kerogen cooks out into shals oil which can then be refined into gasoline and other petroleum products.

Geologists know the oil shale layers as the Green River Formamillion years ago at the bottom of three freshwater lakes at the beginning of the Cenozoic era, long after dinosaurs died off and long before man emerged. Algas and other organic materials died and settled to the bottom of these lakes and built up layers some-times 2,000 feet thick. Because of erosion during the centuries, some of these layers are exposed or near the earth's surface. Ever since the turn of the century, people living on top of the Green River Formation have expected that an oil-shale boom would make them rich. But so far it hasn't happened. In the might. It all rests on economic and environmental concerns,

Exim Bank May Consider Soviet Gas Deal

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6 (AP). gas fields in eastern Siberts. The The U.S. Export-Import Bank acknowledged it might consider a $49.5 million credit loan for a major U.S. Soviet gas deal in the next month despite Con-gress's expected restraint against such credits:

Rep Les Aspin, D., Wis., said he learned the bank will consider within the next month whether to grant the loan to the Russian bank for foreign trade "We might" consider the matter, Export-Import Vice-Chairman Walter C. Sauer confirmed in a brief interview.

Mr. Sauer refused to discuss whether bank consideration of the loan defies a House ban prohibiting such U.S. credits for Soviet trade until President Nixon certifies that the Soviet Union permits free, emigration of Jews and other citizens The loan would go to a $110 million exploration of natural exploration could lead to an estimated $10 billion U.B.-Soviet project to develop the gas fields and ship gas to the U.S. West Along with the direct $49.5 million loan, the Export-Import Bank would guarantee another $49.5 million in loans by private U.S. bends. The Russians would pay the remaining amount. Mr. Aspin opposed the loan. He said the deal, along with a second proposed major U.S. Soviet gas project, "would make last year's fleecing in the Russian wheat deal look like a Sunday school picnic."

The Russian wheat sale has en criticized as a major factor in the increase in food prices. Mr. Aspin said gas would cost $1.25 to $1.50 per thousand cubic feet, more than six times the 20-cent price of natural gas cut off the gas supply at any time, Mr. Aspin said, despite use of the subsidized U.S. loans to finance development of the gas fields. The second proposed U.S. Soviet natural gas project would be in western Siberia. Some of that gas would be shipped to the U.S. East coast.

The two gas projects are the major proposals in U.S.-Soviet trade and development. U.S. officials say they could eventually require some $5 billion in subsidized U.S. credit loans.

The House-passed restraint against such U.S. credits for Soviet trade is certain to be favored in the Senate, where # is cosponsored by 83 of the 100 senators. Only failure of the foreign trade bill to which it is attached could prevent Congress's approval of the Soviettrade restraint.

To Increase Export of Oil After First Significant

Shipment Last Year By Joseph Lelyveld

HONG KONG, Jan. 6 (NYT); -Apparently tempted by the oil crisis, China has been making new commitments to export oil in modest amounts. But there have been no hints that Peking is ready to succumb to the blandishments of the international oil companies in hopes of becoming a major exporter in the near future.

It was only last year that China made its first oil exports of any significance, delivering one million metric tons of low-sulfur crude oil of the highest quality to oilparched Japan. Those deliveries were expected to triple this year. But recently there have been Japanese press reports that the Chinese may be prepared to ex-port as much as five million tons this year if they can rush through necessary pipeline and port con-struction in Liaoning Province in the northeast.

In addition, industry sources that China has recently promised to meet about one-fifth of Hong Kong's requirements for diesel oil, which would be on the order of 100,000 tons. For the first time, this Chinese oil will be sold through a middleman to international oil companies. Local consumers will get it at Esso, Mobil or Shell outlets.

Thailand has been promised 50,000 tons of diesel oil at what a Thai official called a "friendly market price-and it has been encouraged to order more.
Peking has also expressed willingness to talk about oil with the Philippines.

In all these cases, political motives can be discerned. Neither Thailand nor the Philippines has formal diplomatic relations with Peking yet. Hong Kong's Chinesa population will certainly be impressed to know that some of its fuel is coming from the mainland. And China has a strong interest in discouraging Japan from turning to the Soviet Union to meet its energy needs.

Even more obvious are economic incentives for getting into the business of exporting oil when the world price is steadily. climbing. China needs foreign exchange to pay for imports.

Record Production

TORYO, Jan. 6 (AP-DJ)... Chinese Premier Chon En-lai said China's oil production last year reached a record high of 50 million tons, according to a Japanese dispatch from Peking Mr. Chou gave the production figure to visiting Japanese Foreign Min-ister Masayoshi Ohira.

Saudis Get Japan Aid

TOKYO, Jan. 6 (AP-DJ) .-The Japanese government has decided to supply 15,000 metric tons of polyvinyl chloride and other raw materials used for plastic manufacturing to Saudi Arabia as "emergency aid," the newspaper Nihon Keizai Shimbun reported last week. Nihon Keizai said the deal resulted from Deputy Premier Takeo Miki's recent visit to Saudi Arabia.

Chinese Move Ottawa Fears U.S. Firms Try To Beat Investor Deadline

By William Borders OTTAWA Jan 6 (NYT) -The Canadian government is increasingly concerned about American corporations harrying to invest in this country before the effective date of a new law that will limit such investment.

The far-reaching legislation, Canada's first significant move to reverse the trend toward foreign -mostly American - control of Canadian industry, was passed last fall after years of study and poblic debate.

But its official proclamation is still thought to be several months away and, in the meantime, there have already been announcements of two huge American acquisitions of precisely the type that the law seeks to control.

"We intend to proclaim the legislation just as fast as it is possible to do so." Alastair W. Gillespie, the minister of indus-try, trade and commerce, said Friday under hostile questioning from the opposition in the House of Commons. He explained that formal prociamation awaits the establishment of the Foreign Investment Review Agency, which, under the law, will screen investment pro-posals from abroad. Until the elaborate machinery can be set up, the minister said. "I expect foreign investors to come forward readily to discuss their plans with my officials before finalizing their transactions."

Hs conceded, however, that such discussions will be on a voluntary basis."

Company Has Talks

Officials of the Masco Corp., Michigan-based that was involved in the most recent take-over, came to Ottawa last week to discuss with Mr. Gillesple their acquisition late last month of a 49 percent in-terest in EMCO, Ltd., an Ontario plumbing-equipment company with annual sales of more than $100 million.

"Of course, our people were to discuss it with the in Ottawa," John C. happy people in Ottawa," John C. Nicholls jr., the Masco treasurer, "But as far as we're concerned, the purchase is a fait Mr. Nicholls said that while "we were obviously aware of the existence of the law" at the time the transaction, the deal had not been speeded up by the fact that it would have become subject to government scrutiny if it had not been completed rapidly.

The other major acquisition announced since the law was passed was the purchase of the MacDonald Tobacco Co. of Montreal by R. J. Reynolds.

Record Exports Seen For Scotch Whisky

GLASGOW, Jan. 6 (Reuters), Scotch whisky exports for 1973 are expected to reach a new record of more than £250 million with the United States remaining the biggest customer.

The Scotch Whisky Association said recently that the United States had imported 26.3 million gallons in the first 10 months of 1973. It was followed by Japan with 5.2 million gallons in the same period, an increase of 187 percent on the first 10 months of 1972.

which is to be completed in

After the first stage of the law becomes affective this spring a foreigner or a foreign corporathe federal cabinet in Ottawa to take over any Canadian com-pany that has a value of more than $250,000 or annual revenues of more than $3 million. In its second stage, which might come a year later, the screening process will be broadened to include the establishment business in Canada, regardles of its size.

Japanese Order 15% Energy Cut For Big Industry

TOKYO, Jan. 6 (WP).-The government decided yesterday to order 15 percent energy cutbacks for major industrial firms, beginning Jan. 18, to deal with the oil shortage. Original plans called for a 20, percent cuttack to begin Jan. 1, but these were suspended after the Arab decision Christmes Eve to treat Japan as a "friendly nation and increase its petroleum supply.

The program reportedly calls for fuel and power reductions of 15 percent from October condustries, government agencies and banks. Newspapers, television stations and stock ex-changes will be required to reduce cent. Libraries and other public facilities and industries producing or distributing daily necessities will be reduced 5 percent. At a cabinet meeting the government gave a surprise reprieve to Tokyo's after-midnight television strip shows featuring topiess dancers. A proposed bar on after-midnight broadcasting was dropped and the government decided instead to allow stations to determine their own means of energy conscruation.

The difference, bankers say, is that the EIB issue, sold during a difficult market, is still mostly in the hands of the underwriting banks and will take some time before the overhang is absorbed, They say that the Amoco price is a better measure of where things are, which would indicate no discount on the Eurofima paper. Also coming to market with $25 million of 15-year debt is American Motors Corp. If it carries a 9 percent coupon, as

BLONDIE

CHESS

By Robert Byrne

While you're at it, why not take all the marbles? That's precisely what Nor-man Weinstein did in the recent Chicago International Tournament at the La Salie Hotel. The event was sponsored by the United States Chess Federation in conjunc-tion with the Chicago Chess Club to qualify promising young American masters for the international master rank. But Weinstein did more—he ran away with first prize. Weinstein, 23 years old, of Allston, Mass., won six games and drew four for a winning score of 8 points, losing only to the second-prize winner, Gudmundur Sigurjonsson of Iceland, who scored 71/2 points. Since Weinstein easily surpassed the international-master norm of 7 points for the towney, he now has his first leg of the three required to attain the international master rank.

Hottest of the Year This brilliant success, coupled with his performances in the United States Open and the Atlantic Open, in both of which he shared first prize, makes Weinstein the hottest prospect in American chess in 1973.
Still, he had to concede

one ray of the limelight to James Tarjan, 21, of Berkeley, Calif., who, in sharing third and fourth prizes with Inter-national Master Nikola Karaklajic of Yugoslavie, also achieved his first qualifying master rank.

THE EYE OF THE STORM

By Patrick White. Viking. 608 pp. $8.95. Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

ALL too often, the Nobel Prize for literature has seemed like a poor pun on its own name, being awarded more for noble sentiments than literary quality. But in 1973, through some happy accident or belated working of the law of averages, the prize was given to the author of a bona fide first-class novel that is "noble" only in the sense that all really good art is. To go even further, one might almost say that the prize committee has "discovered" an important writer, for until now Patrick White has not been generally known outside Britain and his native Australia.

At first glance, "The Eye of the Storm" would seem to be one more distinguished mediocrity. After glancing at the dust-jacket, my heart sank at the prospect of reading a 608-page novel about a wealthy, sadistic, bedridden woman-once an imperious beautynow, in her 80s, perorating over her life and persecuting everyone within range. Unwelcome images of Bette Davis, Tallulah Bank-head, even Ethel Barrymore, came

But Mr. White has reminded me what a good author can do with even the most unpromising material. His octogenarian invalid has enough variety and vitality to furnish material for half a dosen modern novels, and both her middle-aged children are worth a book in their own right. Like a sophisticated Dickens, the author has created any number of "round" minor characters, each one of them capable of surprising

Though Elizabeth Hunter, the old woman, is more than interesting enough, I cast my lot with her son and daughter, perhaps because it is easier to get involved with someone who has a future, for better or worse. Her son, Basil, is an actor, successful enough to have been knighted in Britain, but not good enough to carry off "King Lear." His mantic posturing is made both pathetic and poignant by his aging body's inability to live up

He and his sister have returned to Australia-after long absence to make sure of their inheritance. Throwing himself on his knees in "the theater of remion." Basil remembers that his right knee is having one of its bad spells. Even worse than his body, his mind is almost always having one of its bad spells, falling to distinguish between sincerity and stagecraft. A symbol of the solipsism and hypertrophied con-sciousness of artists in general, Basil is a better tragedian offstage than on plications of the failure of her

marriage to a fortune huntin French prince, "You deny you self," her husband said, "as par sionately as other women gi themselves." Keeping up appea ances is Dorothy's passion north her poverty, extending the life her clothes and her lading nity. She is forever clutching handbag to her meager boso avoid losing keys and document from which one cannot as to become separated. In ments of stress, the will wildly into this bag, as if expected to find everything has lost there.

Helpless to deal themselves, Basil and Done are no match for their mos who takes a special pleasure reminding her daughter of own amorous triumphs and Do thy's disasters. In reminiscing about their dead father, she to them everything they don't em to know—"in all our life togethe I didn't touch his penis"—a nothing they do. She torners them by keeping a large hom and staff and by such questly gestures as giving away least and sending a hired car to leta a cleaning woman who is too deto clean. The old lady's cook is a Midnight purposan Jewess who escaped the concentration camps to damp a cheap cabarets. Now, though she is old and her feet are cripped by arthritis, the cook eagen ses up in her rusty too ha and tails and gives commun performances for her misres who is too blind to see he Sister Flora, the youngest and sextest of the nurses, has been sect to school to learn "wig its agement," and it is part of he job to make up the invalid well. She is a fine characte Plora—perplexed by an insiste sexuality that she feels she say to put to some other, as re unidentified, use.

At a time when literary Ministerns rather stingily distributed, Mr. White has an unfairsteen of it. He can do just about a erything. His eye, ear, language images, ideas, technique, all he miliarly embrace whatever fiching has learned in its long strong His book flows from him as a as allent laughter.

Look at Dorothy, for example trying to be sociable. When on of the nurses says, "I love people all the princess can think of a "I'm told that's why some wreechoose to work at news stalls in ratiway stations," Again, by helpless pretentiousness, her tou lack of empathy, leads her to n mark, on being served a spirming that support: "Do you realize the for every fish cooked, a still-hi is sperificed?" Her soul is so se .so starged, that you could cry in

Mr. White doesn't though Will a mischiet so deep that it could out as a kind of love, he thread her despised brother—a move of magnificently mocking and yet a unerring that I could only shak my head in admiration. In fact-in looking back over this loo-book, I think I can honestly my that I found only three work I did not like: "dribs and drust." on page 556.

West German team manager Helmut Schoen almost managed a smile and the Russians dumped an angry protest in the lap of the Federation Internationale de Football Association after officially being kicked out of the World Cup competition.

.. This was the situation today as soccer officials from four continents left for home after the draw for the World Soccer Cup this year.

They will return for the June 13 to July 7 championshine in nine West German cities in the biggest sports (estival outside the Olympic Games.

Despite the festive occasion-1,000 invited guests inside the concert ball of Frankfurt's radio station, 800 million television viewers in 41 countries and an undisclosed number of radio listeners yesterday's draw went on without any fireworks. FIFA's organizing committee had met earlier in the day and worked out a plan to keep the big teams apart and had taken all sorts of geographical considerations. They also seeded Brazil, Uruguay, Italy and West Germany to bead

Mister President

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.—President Nixon's celebrated commercial airline flight to California was a small step in a dubious direction. Eventually, a day may come when s White House correspondent story will read like this:

It was BDof one those days for President Nixon. "Bringing the presidency back the people may be great for my image, hot it surc makes it hard to get any work done," he told newsmen tonight as he hrowsed at the paperback hookstand at the Philadelphia Airport. The President was looking for an Agatha Christie or an Erle Stanley Gardner to help him kill an unanticipated three-hour delay in his flight to Providence, where he was scheduled to speak tonight to the annual hanquet of the Daughters of the Sons of Bohemia

He had left Washingtoo on a commercial flight to Providence with one stop scheduled at Phila There, as the plane touched down on the runway, the pilot announced that the rest of the flight had been cancelled. At the airline counter where the President sought an explanation for the sudden cancellation, he was told only that there had been "an equipment problem."

"But I have to be in Providence in three hours to deliver a speech," the President said.
"That's life, buddy," said the airline clerk. After shopping from counter to counter, the President finally found an airline with a flight leaving for Providence three hours later.

"With luck," he said over his fifth cop of airport coffee, "I can get to the Daughters' banquet while they're finishing dessert." Subsequently, the flight turned out to be oversold, so there was no seat for the President when he reached the plane. In a burst of obvious anger he asked the etewardess if she knew she was dealing with the President of the

The President appeared angry enough to continue the argu-ment, but he was prevented from doing so by federal marshals, who forcibly removed him from the plane and might have detained him for questioning had he not apologized profusely for station, where he hoped to catch R late train back to Washington, the President discovered that he had only $1.95 in cash and would have to write a check for the train fare. When the ticket agent asked to see some identification, President Nixon produced his White House pass.

"Don't you have a driver's ilcense?" asked the ticket agent. When the President said he semed to have misplaced his driver's license, the agent sald: "A likely story. Mr. President. Step aside now. The paying customers are getting impatient.

Finally the President was able to borrow the fare money from the White House correspondents. who stated that they thought it better to manipulate the news than spend the night sleeping on railroad henches.

Talking with newsmen on his way back to Washington, the President expressed concern about how long he could continue to do his joh if he keeps on living as people do. This morning, he said, the bus to the White House had been 45 minutes late. and so crowded that he had had to stand all the way.

As a result he had had no chance to read Professor Kis-singer's latest plan for world peace on the bus. It had poured rain just as ha got off the bus, so he was soaked during the three-block walk to the White House and had to spend the morning drying his suit on the radiator which, naturally, made it impossible for him to meet with the calinet or even to see people in his office.

A 3 o'clock conference on the economy had to be cancelled since the President had to be at the airport at 5 p.m. and knew that you can never catch a cah on Pennsylvania Avenue once the rush hour begins. After the President left the train in Washington tonight, he had a 45-minute wait for a hus to his modest row house in the Glover Park district of Wash-He hopes his car pool driver, if he happens to read this story, will pick him up at his house in the morning.

A New Level of Decadence Comes to Haiti

By Judy Klemesrud

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (NYT),-Jean-Claude (Baby Doc) Duvalier didn't show up as promised, but his sister, Nicole, did. So did the cream of Haitian society and a gaggle of Beautiful People-1,500 in all—for the opening night party of a new retreat for the rich, billed by its owners as "the most extraordinary, lascivious and decadent place in the world."

It is Habitation Leclerc, s $1.8-million hilly hideaway, nestled amid almond trees, magnolias, breadfruit and palms on a 15-

'Here the people are smiling... They can always pick the fruits ... if they get hungry."

acre estate that was once supposedly owned hy Pauline Bonaparte Leclerc, the funloving sister of Napoleon.

When I say decadent, I don't necessarily mean sex," said Olivier Coquelin, president of the resort, who also founded such fashionable watering holes as New York's Le Club, Ondine, Cheetah and Hippopotamus, "For me, decadent is just a heautiful way of life, where everything is heautifully lazy, and all you have to do is raise your hand and you get service."

Decadent could also mean that the $150a-day-a-coople paradise is surrounded by some of the worst squalor in the Western Hemisphere, and that tumbledown shacks of Haitians-whose per capita income is round $80 a year-can readily be seen by guests who might happen to be sipping a rum punch at the swimming pool.

But management points out that the natives are friendly and, anyway, the resort is surrounded by a stone wall, which has chunks of broken glass embedded

My friends are always saying, How do you dare live in that country? You'll get killed, you'll get mugged, you'll get robbed," Lawrence Peabody of the Boston Peahodys, co-owner and interior designer of the resort, said shortly before the party hegan. "I tell them, I can't stand the poverty in the United States.' I say, 'Look, here the people are smiling. If nothing else, they can always pick the truits and vegetables if they get hungry."

Mrs. Mary (Sisi) Cahan of New York, resplendent in a bib of imitation diamonds hy Kenneth Jay Lane, nodded in agree-ment. "It's tropical poverty as opposed to cold poverty, which is much worse,"

Girl Injured

Almost 2,000 Haltians stood outside the gates of the resort as the guests arrived for the party. A 15-year-old Haitlan girl was run over by a car and was taken to a hospital.

Once inside the vast resort complex, the guests sipped drinks beside a large circular pool, visited Hippopotamus, a discotheque modeled after the one in New York, and strolled un the grounds. Later, they dined huffet style on such Haitian dishes as chicken and rice, beans and rice, and roast Dig.

The highlight for most of the Haitlans seemed to be the arrival of President Duvalier's sister, Nicole Duvalier Foucard, who wore a long white lace dress and was accompanied by two beefy bodyguards. "Elegant," she said in French, as Mr.

Peabody guided her around the resort. Finally Haiti has something no other country has." When asked about news reports that her 32-year-old sister, Marle-Denise, wielded the real power in the Haitian government, Nicole smiled slightly and replied, "I'm not in politics; I don't know,"

Americans and Haitians at the party commented on how much Haiti has changed since 1971, when the title of president-for-life passed from the late François (Papa Doc: Duvalier, to his then 19-year-old son, Jean-Claude No longer, they in-sisted, is Haiti the terror-ridden country depicted in Graham Greene's novel, "The Comedians," with its dread secret police known as the Tontons Macoutes (Creols for Bogeymen).

Today Haiti courts tourism and last year 206,000 tourists visited here, according to one of the partygoers, Theo Duvai, the executive assistant to the director general of the National Office of Tourism.

'It's tropical poverty as opposed to cold poverty, which is much worse.'

That was more than double the 1972 figure,

The indulgences at the Habitation include 44 individual villas (there is a private pool for every two villas), designed by Albert Mangones, a Haitian architect, to "look terribly ancient." Each residence is rented on B daily flat rate ($150 a day a couple in season; $85 off-season) that includes meals, liquor, three Haitian servants at one's call, and a jeep with chauffeur. Tipping is prohibited.

According to Mr. Coquelin, the resort was financed by two $400,000 loans, one from a New York bank, the other from the Agency for International Development, and $1 million from 14 backers, including Giovanni Agnelli, George Plimpton, the Duke of Bedford, Prince Egon von Furstenberg, Mick Jagger, Jean-Paul Belmondo, Roger Vadim and Baron Edmond de Rothschild

But you don't have to be a somebody to stay at Habitation Leclerc, Mr. Coquelin said. All you need is to be "groovy" and have enough money.

Clifford Irving Has Weekend of Freedom

Clifford Irving had his first taste of freedom since August, 1972, this weekend when he was transferred from a federal prison to a "halfway house" for convicts in New York, and immediately granted a weekend pass. Irving, who was recently granted parole to take effect Feb. 14, was convicted of selling a bogus "autobiography" of Howard Hughes to McGraw-Hill. He had been denied the right to enter the halfway house by the Justice Department, but a federal judge ruled later that he could go to the center for immates who have less than six months to serve. His wife, Edith, is awaiting retrial in Switzerland on related charges. There was no word on where Irving spent the weekend.

Four internationally known figures have been named commanders of the French Legion of Honor. They are Joan Miro, the Spanish painter; Alexander Calder, the American sculptor; Sir Georg Solti, British director of both the Paris Orchestra and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, and Rolf Liebermann, a German who directs the Paris Opera.

Lt. Col. Ramon Horinek, former prisoner of war in Southeast Asia, has settled down in San Antonio, Texas, with his bride, Judi, and their nine children. Horinek, who was divorced before leaving for duty in Vietnam, has six children and Mrs. Horinek, whose former husband was declared legally dead after being listed as missing in action in Vietnam, has three children. They met last summer in Salina, Kan., while he was on a speaking tour. They were married at midnight New Year's Eva in Las Vegas.

Jim Brown, 37, the actor and former Cleveland Browns star fullback is engaged to Diane Laverne Stanley, 18, daughter of a Philadelphia lawyer. Miss Stanley, a sophomore law student at Clark College in Atlanta, met Brown last spring while vaca-tioning in Acapulco, Mexico, They plan to wed at the end of the school year.
